

Environmental liability specialists

W+K has a dedicated team of environmental liability specialists across Australia and New Zealand.

Environmental liability insurance used to be required only by particularly polluting industries, such as mining, chemical plants and waste management companies. However, governments in Australasia and globally have widened the scope of responsibility for environmental damage and pollution, and many businesses and landowners are now liable for the costs of clean-up and are at risk of prosecution.

Our team of environment liability specialists regularly advise environmental insurers on a range of claims under pollution liability policies – those held by landowners, business operators and contractors. This includes compliance, incident management, conducting investigations, responding to environmental enforcement actions and managing corporate and executive officer liabilities. We work with an established group of environmental experts who understand the insurance issues and the commercial drivers of insurers and their customers, especially when high-profile incidents threaten reputations.
